

Berry Metal Company Announces Changes to Executive Management Team

George Boy has been named the company's President & Chief Executive Officer.

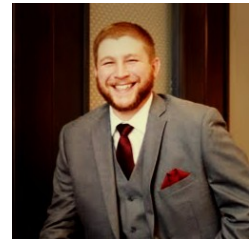

George's expertise in the steel industry along with his transformational leadership style has continued Berry's mission to deliver advanced technologies for the Steel industry. George brings valuable insights for Berry's continual improvements in support of its customers' needs, as seen with the continued growth and expansion of the Company, acquisition of the organization's key talent and cultural shift over this past year.

"The management team we are putting in place will allow Berry Metal to stay agile and forward-thinking as we enter the exciting next phase of Green / Carbon Neutral Steelmaking"

Michael Diana has been named the company's Chief Operations Officer.

Mike returned to Berry Metal Company last fall as the Executive Director of Engineering and with his industry background and leadership, allowed Berry's expansion of Engineering capabilities throughout the project life cycle. With his new role, Mike will now oversee Engineering and the Manufacturing aspects of Berry's operation. Mike's experience will bring enhanced improvements in the Company's production capabilities and continued facilities development.

Casey Lege has been named the company's Chief Financial Officer.

Casey has been with Berry Metal Company for ten years and her education, exceptional knowledge, and valuable insight into the aspects of operations has proven to be supportive of Berry's continued organic growth and sound financial position. Casey has played a key role in the Company's new ERP system implementation, human resources, and internal information technology improvements.

Please congratulate all three of our Executives on their promotions and for their relentless pursuit of Berry's mission to continue providing innovative and quality solutions for the Steel industry.
